COMPANY FORMATION AND BUSINESS PLANNING

During the early days of starting a business perhaps the most important—and often most formidable—decision an entrepreneur must make is the selection of a legal structure for the company.

Critchfield's attorneys assist clients in both the legal and practical aspects of forming corporations, limited liability companies, and joint ventures in commercial, industrial, technological, professional, and other entrepreneurial endeavors.

Deciding on a corporate structure involves weighing multiple criteria, including the varying degrees of legal liability owners may face based on legal structure, tax implications, the costs of formation and ongoing administration, as well as considerations regarding the future needs and growth of the business.

Starting a new business is a thrilling time and our corporate attorneys are there to assist our clients with the development and fulfillment of competitive business plans while helping to protect them from unnecessary legal risks and costs.
