Employment and Labor

OSHA

The Occupational Safety and Health Administration sets industry health and safety standards for a variety of jobs, from construction to health care, and oversees those standards through the monitoring and inspection of work environments of all kinds.

Our experienced attorneys provide guidance and representation to businesses on all OSHA compliance and enforcement issues, working closely with our clients and safety experts to help them comply with all safety regulations pertinent to their industry and workplace. In the event OSHA investigates one of our clients, we provide full representation of employers in all aspects of OSHA investigations from the initial visit through the informal settlement conference. We also represent employers in all aspects of OSHA litigation, including trying cases before the Department of Labor Administrative Law Judges and appeals to Federal District Court.
